My Story

I was born in the Upper Peninsula of Michigan, but didn't recognize the natural beauty surrounding me until many years later. I moved to Rochester, MN to complete my training as a physician and have lived and worked there since 1983. My serious interest in nature photography began in the late 1990s. I have traveled to 6 continents, but my lake home on Lake Namekagon near Cable, is one of my favorite areas for photography. The call of the loon every summer pulls me into a kayak for hours searching for photographic opportunities. The four seasons in the northwoods provides endless images that capture the beauty of nature. I shoot almost exclusively with digital cameras now and use primary Canon equipment. My goal in photographing nature is create an image that makes viewers feel as though they were with me when I took the picture and captures the essence of the experience.
